God's Delight....I wonder what or who brings joy into your life at the moment? What or who makes your heart swell with delight at the merest thought? A pensioner might jump up and down with excitement on winning the lottery; a lover might feel like bursting with happiness at the sight of their beloved. We understand these emotions, and I hope that in 2008 you will find a goodly portion of joy yourself, but how often do you think about the way God delights in you?

At the turn of each year in this Benefice, we give out cards with a Bible verse on. The idea is that you keep this card somewhere it can be seen throughout the seasons, so that you can ponder the verse alongside the different twists and turns that the year will surely hold.

So which verse have we chosen for 2008? It's from Psalms 147 verse 11...

God takes pleasure in those who honour him, in those who trust in his constant love (Good News version) or as another translation puts it...

...the Lord delights in those who fear him; who put their hope in his unfailing love.

It is a given - a done deal if you like - that God's love for you is unfailing. Like a good parent, his love for us does not disappear because we might forget or neglect him. But how God's heart rejoices and brims with pleasure when he sees that we remember him in our lives; when we live with him as our Lord; when we involve him in our daily decisions and talk to him and seek to do his will. Then, Jesus says, God is like a woman who when finding a tenth of her lost wealth, calls her friends to come and celebrate with her. And again, God is like a father who throws a party for the son who came to his senses and remembered the blessings within his father's house.

So my hope is not just for your joy this year, but that you will choose to live 2008 with the purpose of delighting God; by acknowledging him as your Lord and trusting in his good purposes for you.

Yours in faith

Ruth

Hunton Book Club November 2007 Review

'Tell No One' by Harlan Coben

Every year Elizabeth and David Beck return to Lake Charmaine, a place that has been part of their lives since they were children. But on their thirteenth visit, Elizabeth is kidnapped and murdered, while David is left for dead. Eight years pass, but to David it still feels as if more than one life ended on that night. Then an image of Elizabeth appears on his computer screen brutally ripping open the old wounds. Is it just a practical joke? Or evidence that somehow his wife Elizabeth is still alive? Suddenly David is running away from his safe, ordinary life, chasing a ghost whose messages hold out a desperate hope - and warn him to tell no one.

Book club members generally agreed with reviews that this is a pacy, devour-at-one-sitting thriller. Several enjoyed the read and thought the author had cleverly fitted together the pieces of the story like a jigsaw. Some were uncomfortable with the detailed descriptions of violence. Others found the book too light a read and the style unsatisfying. There was a lively debate too about racial stereotyping and whether it was fair or not to accuse the author of using this inappropriately, as a shorthand device. Interestingly, one member had seen a recent film of the book which avoided the shortcomings we discussed (available in French with English sub-titles). Unsurprisingly, given the mixed reactions, the average score for the book was 6/10.

Armchair Gardening

Shorter gardening days and creeping cold encourage us to curl up by a warm fire with books and seed catalogues to dream and plan. Pictures are always perfect, veg are crisper, fruit is fresher, flowers are fuller, last year's disappointments recede and next year's victories are just a scatter of seeds away.

Also it has finally been shown that fruit and veg grown organically are better for us. Not only are antioxidants present in greater quantities to help cut the risk of cancer and heart disease but also beneficial minerals such as iron and zinc are enhanced by this method of growing.

Armchair planning is great and the scientific evidence inspiring, it won't be too long now before we can get out and get gardening again!

Dennis

Currently there is a white male aged 60 years who has a white beard and swept back hair about 5'8" tall and slim build, he is well spoken and often carries a blue holdall. He usually stays at a church overnight in Week Street Maidstone. He often wears a variety of jackets from suits to wax jacket or jacket covered in paint stains.

His name is Dennis. He has a habit of knocking on doors asking for food or small change.

He has been a vagrant for many years and can look after himself.

Some residents have been giving him money and food. Unfortunately this encourages him. The police are receiving calls about him as often he scares residents because he appears at their door at odd times of the day or night.

I ask you to be kind to him and not to give him any food or money as he does have access to both.
